wronged people, he established Howard University, with its broad platform, as broad as humanity. He welcomed every class into its halls; he sought to make the colored man forget he was colored and to remember he was simply a man. So when he came to select his faculties for the several departments, he looked over the country to see if he could find any colored men competent to take part. He found them, and he is the only man who could have done it. He believed it to be his duty to strangle prejudice by giving the colored man

THE FIRST ANNUAL HOWARD ALUMNI UNION BANQUET.

Elequent Encouragement for Emancipated Race to Proceed to Fresh Triumphs in the Battle of Life-Fred. Douglass, Dr. Purvis, and Other Leaders Heard From,

The first annual reunion and dinner of the Union Alumni Association of Howard University, comprising the graduates of the college-law, medical, theological, and normal departments—was held last evening at Welcker's, and brought together a full company, many of whom have attained dis-tinction in various walks of life. The offitinction in various walks of life. The officers of the newly-formed association are;
President, Frof. J. M. Gregory; vice presidents, A. B. Lind, L. W. Livingstone, D.
A. Wiseman, and S. C. Collins; corresponding sceretary, Frof. J. H. Smith; recording ecretary, R. T. Mose; treasurer, Dr. F. J.

Graduates—J. T. Wormley, J. M. Gregory, J. C. Naile, J. H. Smythe, O. S. B. Wall, J. E. O'Hara, W. E. Mathews, J. H. Smith, Wm. Warring, H. M. Brown, F. J. Smath, Wm. Warring, H. M. Brown, F. J. Shadd, R. T. Moss, G. W. Cook, A. W. Upshaw, T. S. D. Berger, H. E. Baker, G. G. Hutchins, R. S. Smith, J. P. Turner, T. M. Dent, J. C. Norwood, D. E. Wiseman, A. C. Asbury, J. B. Cooper, A. E. Draper, W. H. H. Hart, A. F. Hilyer, S. R. Hughes, J. E. Hunt, C. C. Johnson, A. B. Lind, and L. W. Livingstone.

Among those whose engagements prevented them from attending the reunion were Prof. W. J. Simmons, president State University, Louisville, Ky.; Prof. W. G. Sears, Lincoln Institute, Jefferson, Mo.; Prof. J. W. Morris, president Avery Institute, South Carolins; Prof. T. B. Suowden, Centenary Biblical Institute, Baltimore.

Agoodly menu was provided, and after the last delicacy on the long list was served, Prof. Gregory, the presiding officer, arose and addressed the company. Reunions had occasionally been held by the graduates of the separate departments of the university, but he was glad to be present at the first reunion of the united alumni. The united association was the natural outgrowth of a well-established and growing college. The graduates of all the departments are the sons of the college alike, and it was well for them to come together in this way. The social benefits of the meeting were referred to. One of the advantages of the remnion was the opportunity it gave graduates to make suggestions to trustees and officers in the management of the institution, which are so often helpful to them. He predicted the forming of similar reunions of the united alumni of universities for freedmen throughout the country, as in Yale, Harvard, and other colleges.

smiar reamons of the united atumn of universities for freedmen throughout the country, as in Yale, Harvard, and other colleges.

Since the formation of the Howard University twenty years ago graduates had been sent out who have made some progress in life and have some influence in the communities. They have had their trials and difficulties, their ups and down, but have generally been more or less successful. Like graduates of other schools, without the influence of wealth or powerful friends, they have had rather more downs than ups, and have had to struggle against a bitter race p ejudice, but they have gone steadily forward, making a name for themselves and upholding the standard of the college. The alumni do not forget that the character of the university is established by its graduates, and that it has not history until the graduates by their achievements make its history.

Dr. Purvis was then called upon to respond to the toast: "The founder of the Howard University." No one deserved the title of "great man" more than did the founder of Howard University—Gen. Oliver O. Howard. He is the possessor of rare combinations of head and beart, such as are seldem found combined in one man, He was a soldier, scholar, philanthropist, statesman, and Christian.

statesman, and Christian.

"It is a historical fact," he continued,
"that in all revolutionary conflicts, some man, or set of men, have been thrown to the surface who were equal to the necessities of the hour, either to suppress the revolutionary attempts or to make them a revolutionary attempts or to make them a success.

"The nibilist of to-day, loving liberty, fearing not death, frenzied by the iron yoke of oppression, fligs himself against the case and the institutions of all the Russians, seeking their destruction. He has no plan for the future, he simply sees the enemy of Russian liberty, it absorbs him; to destroy it is his one idea and hope. He trusts to the future and to the justice of his cause to produce the man who, in the hour of his greatest need, will bring order out of chaos; who will lead him from the darkness of oppression into the sunlight of freedom. pression into the sunlight of freedom. The socialist plants himself similarly agains the absolutism of united Prussia. The The socialist plants himself similarly against the absolutism of united Prussia. The communist fills the government of the empress of the sea with doubt and uncertainty. They caused to be developed in France leaders who, in turn, have given her the best government she has had for a hundred years. For fifty and more years the abolitionists of our country (composed, as they were, of the best intellects, of the noblest of women, and loftiest of men, whose unselfish devotion to the cause of human liberty stands unchallenged and unequaled) confronted the American God—slavery. They combined and avowed to destroy it. They had no plan for the future; they simply saw the cussed institution, and against it they hurled their javelins of truth, their iron logic, which carried conviction to the loyal liberty-loving, God-fearing men and women of the country. Such was the effect of their agitation that the lovers and defenders of the institution in sheer desperation rushed into rebellion to save it; the conflict between slavery on the one hand and freedom on the other. Forum the from comparative tween slavery on the one hand and freedom on the other, brought from comparative obscurity into prominence and greatness many men; it gave the nation the Napoleon of the age, Grant; the Marshal Ney, Sherman, and, on the other side, Lee, who possessed all the genius of the fron Duke, Wellington: but, greater than them all, it gave us the scholar, soldier, philanthropist, statesman, and Christian, Gen. Oliver O. Howard. The conflict saved the hation, destroyed slavery, and made the victims of the institution freemen and citizens. But they were not liked as other citizens were—the prejudice of the northern white man, as a class, brought from comparative tution freemen and citizens. But they were not liked as other citizens were—the prejudice of the northern white man, as a class, was against him: the hatred of the white man of the south was concentrated upon him, and not without reason, for he was no longer his chattel and slave, but his political equal. For his benefit the freedman's hureau was established, and at its head was placed Gen. Howard, whose coming was halled as the harbinger of peace and the dawning of a bright era. With all the acuteness of the scholar, the nobleness of the philanthropist, and the tenderness of a Christian he undertook his work. He saw at a glance that the bureau, as an institution, could live but a short time. As a student of American history he knew we lived for the present and the future and forgot the past, he saw that something must be done to destroy the prejudice and hate that daily manifested fiself against the emancipated millions. He realized that the prejudice was the result of condition, and that the solution was in bestowing an education upon the new citizens. His cause was clear, he leaped into the arena, became the Moses of the people; he saw that unless such a course was pursued the institutions of the country would not be safe, and that in time there would be a conflict between ignorance and auperstition against intelligence which in its results would be far more appalling than any we had experienced. To obviate such a calamity, to do justice to a

Your duty is to see that every interest is protected; the responsibility of American citizenship demands of you the highest character of manhood, and to achieve this no time should be lost in securing for your children an education that will qualify them to fill any position where intelligence, industry, and integrity are required. I believe it is better to be frank and come directly to the question, and ask every father and mother whether they are not derelict in making efforts to secure for their children employment that will tend to elevate and not demoralize. There appears to be an indifference on the part of many holding responsible positions relative to advancement in the proper channels. What are the facts that every man and woman of our city are aware off That they expend more money foolishly for imaginary pleasure and expensive dreasing according to our population and limited opportunities than any other class of people. We produce nothing and consume everything, and receive for our labor, such as it is, the very lowest wages; and in view of the fact that the migration of Europeans who are finding employment among the very class of aristocrats that once depended entirely upon you for your services. Remember that to-day your children are without employment and that no extended the content over came from the kitchen, and it behooves you to make some great effort to better their condition. It is the duty of every colored man to seriously consider the industrial education of the rising generation. A more vital question does not present itself to the seven millions of colored people.

try to see if he could find any colored men competent to take part. He found them, and he is the only man who could have done it. He believed it to be his duty to strangle prejudice by giving the colored man an opportunity to demonstrate what was in him: he appreciated the wrong done him, and that too much could not be done to wipe it out. It required a brave man to establish Howard University, with its catholic ideas, and to plant it upon the most beautiful knoll of our city, with a structural elegance in keeping with the noble ideas he sought to implant in this university with him were the result of conviction, as he believed in a common God." The toast "Absent Members" was eloquently responded to by R. T. Moss, recalling memories of many absent ones, both living and dead.

"The Utility of Missions" was suggested. and D. E. Wiseman was called up, and called the attention of the members to the importance of the subject of the toast. "Missions" he believed to be the greatest factor in elevating the lower misses in great eitles; it was, in reality, through missions that Christ had worked.

Hon. Frederick Douglass was selected to respond to the toast "Self-made Men."

"I am of posed to personalties," said Mr. Douglass, "even when they are employed in the form of delicate insinuation. I think I see something of this offense in the call upon me to respond in behalf of self-made men. If you mean to insinuate that I am not a gentleman and a scholar, like others around this delightful board, I resent the call my, and prove my title to be here by the card with "LL. D." in large letters, affixed to my name. But, Mr. President, I will not, where I am so well-known, attempt to pass myself off for what I am not. I plead guilty at once to the implied charge. Upon the whole, I am rather proud of it, and in this last remark, you will perhaps say that I betray my peculiar origin, for of all men in the world. It has over 170 converts and over 100 asking what shall they do to be saved. It will not baptize until the third and fourth Sundays in March. Its meetings are under the control of the pastor, Rev. R. Johnson. The Amsteur Glee Club gave a grand reception and entertainment on Friday evening at the Cadets' armory. W. H. Black acted as master of ceremonics. The ladies were tastefully dressed in handsome costumes to suit the occasion. The reception committee consisted of Nicholas Colbert, Charles A. Beale, Henry Jarvis, jr., Hamilear Turley, L. Murry Browne, J. E. Mason, Wash Wood, George W. Horton, George Ware, and Joseph W. Tucker. The auxiliary committee was composed of J. Wm. Mayse, James B. Smith, Charles W. "Flung overboard on the broad ocean of life, without oars or life preservers, they bravely buffet the billows by their own sinewy arms, and swim in safety where other men, supplied with all the appliances which wealth and power can give, despair and go down. Such men as these, whether we find them at home or abroad, whether professors or plowmen, whether of Anglo-Saxon or Anglo-African origin, are self-made men, and are entitled to some respect because of their manly origin. It is the glory of the United States that such men are abundant. America is the nursery of such men. The explanation of their abundance is found in two facts; First, the respectability of labor, and secondly, the fact we have here no privileged classes. We throw every man upon his own resources. We care not who was his father, or who his mother."

Capt. Fleetwood and his cadets looked well on the 22d. President William W. Patton then responded to the sentiment, "Howard University." He congratulated the alumni on the interest they showed; in their alma mater. He passed a tribute on the founder of the university. The college was founded on the broadest principles and educated every one who applied, without regard to sex or race. The university has done a grand work, and in nineteen years of existence 3,000 students have been admitted to the various departments, and there have sent forth 250 ministers of Christianity, about the same number of lawyers, and over 400 physicians. The university has now survived the dangers of infancy, the opposition of foes, the indifference of the prejudiced, and the reverse of financial disasters. Its property is to-day free from debt, and the 400 students are making good progress. The university has a promising future. Public bodies and private benefactors feel safe in aiding a permanent and successful institution. Students in all parts of the country are learning of the advantages which the university offers, and at present thirty states are represented among them.

Resolved, That we highly appreciate the assistance given to our alma mater by Congress, from year to year, and as alumni we testify to the great good derived from these timely benefactions which have enabled the trustees to furnish to young people of both sexes educational advantages and privileges which they could not have enjoyed.

Excellent, That we extend our thanks to the board of trustees for the recognition given the graduates of the university by appointing several of their number to vacantes in the different faculties. By so doing they have been moving in the direction pointed out by its illustrious founder, and we hope that the success of those already filling subordinate places in the institution will be such as to justify the board of trustees in appointing its own graduates to still higher and more responsible positions.

The latest contribution to the controversy between "IT. B." and George T. B.' I was in Mr. Sumner's bedroom holding him by the hand when he died. 'T. B.' falsifies knowing it when he says I was not up stairs, but down stairs with him. This he knew to be false, whether I was up stairs or not he might not have known, but when he says I was with him down stairs he knows that was not a fact. All of the testimony, except "I.
